The MT Summit biennale conference

The European Association for Machine Translation (EAMT) serves the growing community of people engaged with machine translation (MT) and translation tools, including researchers, developers, users and translators.

The biennale MT Summit conference regularly gathers 300-400 participants from all over the world. Conference presentations feature in-depth looks at the latest MT research, tools, and technology, often before the technology has become widely available. Presentations also include enterprise case studies from large corporations and organizations using MT, best practices from the global localization industry, the fruits of cutting-edge research from universities and research centres, professional translators' experiences, and the results of EU-funded ICT projects.

The conference draws participants from a range of organizations:

- companies and institutions that already use or are potential users of MT
- localization companies using MT in the translation workflow
- renowned MT scientists and researchers
- companies and institutions developing MT systems
- R&D teams from both private companies and public universities
- translation professionals

MT Summit 2025 – Geneva

The 20th edition of the MT Summit will take place at the very heart of Geneva. Participants and sponsors will enjoy Geneva's international and multilingual atmosphere.

With four official languages and numerous international organizations, Switzerland has a long-standing tradition of excellence in translation services and has become an early adopter of cutting-edge machine translation technologies. The country's translation industry is known for embracing AI-driven innovations to meet the growing demand for accurate, efficient, and scalable translation solutions. By supporting this event, sponsors will gain direct exposure to industry leaders, decision-makers, and key players at the forefront of this industry in Switzerland and abroad.
